FUNCTIONAL NEUROLOGY: PRINCIPLES AND CLINICAL APPLICATIONS

Functional Neurology (FN) is a paradigm, a prospective to comprehend and to cure the Central Nervous System (CNS).

The premise is: the brain is a receiver and a transmitter.

It Receives multi-modal stimuli, like touch, light, sound etc.

It Transmits movement through motor responses. All the stimuli but one are transient, the exception being gravity, which cannot be turned off.

Consequently the CNS can be examined and understood through the motor responses to external stimuli. The functional neurology paradigm and the clinical neuroscience allow for the definition of specific rehabilitation protocols.

Rehabilitation strategies include, ocular exercises, head/eye coordination, electrical somatosensory stimulation.

COURSE GOAL: Exploring the basic of FN through its scientific principles and clinical application.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES: To provide a framework of clinical reasoning from a neurological prospective.
